

シンポジウム「洗う」

“薬 用 石 け ん”

戸 田 浄*

Deodrant Soap

Kiyoshi TODA*

Abstract

So-called baby soap containing sterilizing chemicals appears to be causal agents of primary irritant contact dermatitis among many Japanese babies. It might be caused from misunderstanding of mothers that the soap is supposed to work gently and safely to the baby skin. It must be, therefore, proposed that this kind of baby soap is called only deodrant soap.