

日本香粧品学会誌 Vol. 33, No. 4, pp. 294–299 (2009)

〈シンポジウム II〉

『おとこ力を考える』

男をつくる男性ホルモン

堀江重郎

Testosterone Makes Men

Shigeo HORIE

Abstract

Recently, the role of testosterone for men's health has been reappraised. Several lines of evidence have shown that the level of testosterone might function as a surrogate marker as an index for the susceptibility of diseases. Indeed men with higher testosterone level are likely to enjoy the longevity. Furthermore the function of testosterone in the socio-economical aspects is now appreciated. The level of testosterone should be monitored in men to maintain their health and social activities.

Key words: testosterone, metabolic syndrome, vasopressin, longevity.